

Representation of the People Act : 1867

By

Indana Simonde

ISBN : 9781697470192

Part 1 : Representation of the People Act 1867

A Question and Answer of Rights

When you think of your local General Practitioner, the master of the dark art that is the science of medical health, do you think of it's governing body, the General Medical Council? Every trade and industry on the entire face of the country is overseen by either a trade union or by a governing body. These ombudsmen of sorts are then overseen by stakeholders such as managing directors and local or national community interest groups. This leads us to local (council) and national government (split into constituencies). From there you have multi-lateral dialogue between nations in organisations such as the United Nations, the African Union and the European Union who between them allow cohesive and peaceful communication, mediation and support intergovernmental action as ambassadors of national governments. In between all of these groups is the National Anti-Terror Organisation, and local and national as well as international organisations such as Interpol (the International Police of sorts, governed by a collaboration between governments).

World Bank and the International Monetary Fund work towards increasing the efficiency of such organisations and the World Food Programme. The United Nations System which has headquarters for the entire programme of any given Organ or Vessel, which are names for the administrative, strategic and operational aspects of the United Nations, has it's operational base and headquarters in New York, although different UN System programmes such as World Bank, the IMF and the World Health Organisation operate and are based internationally. Who overseas a corrupt government? Who stops corruption within a superpower? If it is left solely to the people of any state an issue arises in the fact that though a global precedent may well be set in the actions undertaken by an international contingent of super powers. But who overseas the people who are meant to protect every public, and not just one.

Every nation has a vested interest in protecting the people within their borders and saving the tax payers of their nations from an increase in the burden(s) of social welfare and underfunded government agencies or defunct programmes that are underused and failing. Though the secret to the successes and failures of any state or national cause is the people involved, the agenda being promoted and the role of the cause to reduce violence of any kind globally. The issue comes in when you start asking people if they believe in global disarmament. They find it distasteful, or lacking the cohesive synergy that comes with national pride in the historical achievements of generations of combat or competitive assault on markets of trade and industry.

With the onset of every generation, the same battle is fought time and again. That battle is with the idea of ego, pride in individualistic self creation and motivation, which lacks the spark of a societal actor. You are a societal actor, the avant garde of civilisation in the modern age. Directing the course of history through simply being yourself is harder than it looks for people who make themselves readily available as the architects of civil society.

The idea that the law is there to serve and protect the public is also the sole impetus of societal interchange between the powers that create the law and the powers that enforce it. Without the rebellious youthful caged ignorance of imagination, the dream remains still and silent.

Representation of the People Act 1867 : 1867

CHAPTER 102 30 and 31 Vict

Legislation is the key to educating a civil population and ordering society through education between legal representatives, advocates of and engineers of a social design that works through administration of courts from the Supreme Court through to the High Court of Justiciary and the various civil and appellate courts. In 1867, the House of Lords would have been the highest appeal court in the entire Kingdom. The bicameral chamber of Westminster of the modern age would have been a very different sight. The multiculturalism that is vigorously defended and promoted as a result of the efforts to continue international relationships with foreign nations is also the reason why any responsible government, whether left or centre left leaning must always remember the dangers of the forgotten former ideal, the fallen angel of the living world that is now transformed in the form of the Far Right.

What happened to the social dream, to be society in an age of upward and downward social mobility is the difference between how you view your world and how the world views the same world. Working class attitudes and sentimentality are not the very cause of the limitations of every state. The dream of changing society for the better is replaced with extremes of poverty and wealth, where consumption and over consumption in one nation are replaced with unavailability of the forces that are required to create a stable and productive economy. If GDP and GNP are closely linked to a nation's ability to create small and medium sized startups (which are hard enough to start in the western hemisphere), what do you think it is like to start a small or medium sized blue collar form of employment in a fair trade supporting country with the backing of the International Monetary Fund?

Once the restructuring loan is confirmed and the full or partial balance is transferred to the dependant nation with terms and contractual obligations, is it likely overseen by a mentor or guardian organisation that removes instances of corruption at the risk of sanctions? Depending on the nature of the industry that is being produced, to have a certain amount of trade and industry through the new start ups guided by the IMF there could be any number of guiding nations from Chinese to Afghan and American to Finnish citizens who would oversee the first two or three years of construction. But as a form of anti-corruption, would they be given access to what essentially is public funds in order to build a country's economy before leaving without the need for armed social coercion in political or high profile nations?

There are never easy answers to building a political school of thought that transcends international boundaries but rather encompasses the need for a common ground with which to begin the public discussion with regards to a potential future in space. But if the human race, as opposed to host nations cannot see a future in which we all go to Mars or Uranus or the stars in the heavens as one combined force, have we, the people got life wrong or are we asking the wrong questions of our leaders?

An Act further to amend the Laws relating to the Representation of the People in England and Wales.

Complacency, is a feeling of smug or uncritical judgement of ones work, actions, even achievements. On the 15th of August 1867, a law that radically changed the lives, culture and lifestyle of the world, as it was to households up and down England and Wales and eventually Scotland and Ireland as well came into force, having been built up over years. Struggles that were hard fought for and hard won are now the cause of the entire planets downfall as a result of the mismanagement of various solutions to societies problems.

Transplanting the NHS as a blueprint for a management system that creates a learning infrastructure, improves the priorities of global health management, employees as corporate individuals and incorporates the need for various pharmacological goods and services such as for instance mental health drugs or even plasters. Imagine your child fell and you couldn't stop him from crying because he had a cut on his toe for the lack of shoes. You can't afford a plaster and there are no organisations to help him. Now imagine he is a haemophiliac or that he has crones disease or leukaemia in a group of states known as Africa.

People complain about the underfunding and understaffing of a health service that has infrastructure, people and sick people at that, to deal with every day. Bed side manner may be all good and well, but when you have pneumonia, it can kill a person. Now imagine being told that you are lucky your not in your 80's. It would likely feel like bedside manner was missing, but over time, the fear of death grows less jagged and more real as your bones begin to creak, your back hurts, your knees hurt as you go up stairs and your eyesight gets worse every year. I'm still young, but I imagine care homes are helpful if (god forbid) you get dementia. In fact, a care sector is always really great within any country. It puts the heart back into society almost immediately. As a part of the Royal Prerogative, it is the ability to Prorogue Parliament through Constitutional Acts which is usually achieved at the end of a Parliamentary Session.

Part 2 : Representation of the People

A

Current situation: Worked as an Escort with a friend despite having children. Advertised her services online and used to work in a lap dancing bar. Escaped a troubled previous relationship with the father of her children and now currently is looking for a motor home with which to work from discretely, as opposed to from private rented accommodation. Struggles daily with mental health issues and is supervised by the police and mental health services both for her protection and so as to keep tabs on her.

Problem : Social worker involved in the case of her children such that she might be able to regain access to her children over time. Though at the same time, alcohol is a major issue, of which dependence in order to overcome the difficulties of a troubled and abusive childhood and relationship worries and fears is a problem.

Who supports her apart from a CPN or Social Worker and how does she support herself apart from Universal Basic Income in order to allow her to regain a semblance of dignity for her children. More to the point, how do you stop her from Escorting for money?

Potential solution : Free education and the offer of gainful employment in a supportive infrastructure that pays enough to afford a lifestyle without alcohol and (or) drugs misuse. Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate her into an educational environment. Social support and community development within her local environment. Support to regain access to her children through legal means, a home to raise her children in and support to get her feet off the ground with regards to the rigours of the academic lifestyle.

B

Current situation: Travelled overseas with a view to being with her husband and currently attempts to support herself through various means that don't involve Escorting, though previously worked as an Escort. Struggles to find paid work as a result of immigration status and struggled for a while to find support for substance misuse and alcohol misuse due to peer pressure. Got involved with a bad crowd and was involved with the supply of controlled substances for a while.

Problem : No social work involvement, though access to her children is limited if existent at all. No access to legal support due to immigration status and though support from friends is readily available, there are no organisations that provide support or counselling at present for childhood abuse(s).

Who supports her as she has no recourse to state benefits and (or) Universal Basic Income in order to allow her to regain a semblance of dignity for her children. More to the point, how do you stop her from Escorting for money?

Potential solution : Legal infrastructure in order to allow her access to her children and to organise support for immigration support as opposed to a totalitarian or territorial attitude as at present. Free education and the offer of gainful employment in a supportive infrastructure that pays enough to afford a lifestyle without alcohol and (or) drugs misuse. Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate her into an educational environment. Social support and community development within her local environment.

C

Current situation: Worked as a nurse and suffered a sexual attack. Currently forced to work full time despite her children and terminal illness.

Problem : Community dependence and reliance on her counselling skills within a specific working environment. Struggles with depression and requires greater support such that she doesn't require work at such a demanding pace.

Who supports her apart from family and religious infrastructures and how does she support herself apart from full time gainful employment in order to allow her to regain a semblance of dignity for her children. More to the point, how does she keep herself afloat, pay a mortgage, council tax and stay in control of her finances whilst being terminally ill?

D

Current situation: Fell pregnant at an early age and struggles with children's attitude and overbearing behaviour. Substance misuse issues and difficulty regaining a semblance of normality. Father currently unavailable due to mental ill health at present.

Problem : Social worker involved in the case of her children such that she might be able to regain access to her children over time. Though at the same time dependence in order to overcome the difficulties of a troubled and abusive childhood and relationship(s) are a cause for concern due to worries and fears that they will return to care.

Who supports her apart from a CPN or Social Worker and how does she support herself apart from Universal Basic Income in order to allow her to regain a semblance of dignity for her children.

Potential solution : Free education and the offer of gainful employment in a supportive infrastructure incorporating childcare that pays enough to afford time to study. Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate her into an educational environment and social environment. Social support and community development within her local environment. Support to regain access to her children through legal means, a decent home to raise her children in and support to get her feet off the ground with regards to the rigours of the academic lifestyle.

E

Current situation: Homeless for a number of years. Saved enough money for a motor home with friends on the street but when money was paid to the owner, the offer of accommodation was retracted without a contract or refund of money. Lost access to her children and has not seen them for a long time.

Problem : No substance misuse or drugs counselling required or involved but due to very poor physical health, diet, nights on the street and old age, is unable to find suitable accommodation at present.

Who supports her as she is unable to gain access to support services or counselling and sleeps in a cemetery with many other homeless individuals?

Potential solution : Supported accommodation, counselling services if required, Universal Basic Income. An offer of supportive education where necessary or simply a chance to change her life and work from home or start a business that supports other homeless individuals to find home(s).

F

Current situation: Homeless teenager, male. Potentially involved in substance misuse and alcohol misuse from an early age.

Problem : Class A drugs (namely Heroin and Crack Cocaine) readily available from a friend who supports her own children through supply of the same Class A drugs within the community.

Who supports either of them to kick the habit and turn their lives around (rehabilitation as opposed to jail sentences) or provides mental health support the children, the homeless teenager or the drug dealer reliant on money for the children, who in their youth are already learning from the mistakes of their parent(s).

Potential solution : Free education and the offer of gainful employment in a supportive infrastructure that pays enough to afford a lifestyle without alcohol and (or) drugs misuse. Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate all into an educational environment. Social support and community development within their local environment.

G

Current situation: Group of homeless individuals, mixed sexes.

Problem : Heroin dependence of which some are on Methadone (potential substance replacement).

Whilst support is offered for substance misuse in the form of Methadone, who supports the group with any other dependencies, peer pressure and the rigours of not having a roof or the opportunity to access support to find employment?

Potential solution : Supported Accommodation, free education and the offer of gainful employment in a supportive infrastructure that pays enough to afford a lifestyle without alcohol and (or) drugs misuse. Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate them into an educational environment. Social support and community development within their local environment.

H

Current situation: Mental ill health, former substance misuse issues and alcohol dependency due to loss of access to children as a result of abusive relationships and childhood abuse.

Problem : Social worker involved in the case of children.

Potential solution : Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate into an educational environment. Social support and community development within the local environment. Support to regain access to children through legal means, a home to raise children in and support with regards to the rigours of the academic lifestyle.

I

Current situation: Worked as an Escort. Advertised her services online and used to work in a lap dancing bar. Escaped a troubled previous relationship and now currently is struggling daily with mental health issues and is supervised by the police and mental health services both for her protection and so as to keep tabs on her.

Problem : Struggles with the difficulties of finding a home without a job or education and is a troubled individual, suffered an abusive childhood and relationship worries and fears.

Who supports her?

Potential solution : Free education and the offer of gainful employment in a supportive infrastructure that pays enough to afford a lifestyle without alcohol and (or) drugs misuse. Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate her into an educational environment.

J

Current situation: Addicted to Class A drugs as a result of peer pressure. Due to the social nature of substance misuse, individual lost self worth and struggles to find permanent housing.

Problem : Class A drugs. Criminal record (or court hearings) for variety of charges including House Breaking.

Who supports J into work and off the streets and off of drugs?

Potential solution : Free education and the offer of gainful employment in a supportive infrastructure that pays enough to afford a lifestyle without alcohol and (or) drugs misuse. Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate into an educational environment. Social support and community development within local environment.

K

Current situation: Immigration status due to lack of passport leaves K stuck in exile from home country and trapped as an invisible citizen without full citizenship rights.

Problem : access to both children after abusive relationship breakdown and lack of support from or for children.

Potential solution : Legal fee's to help with immigration status, free education and the offer of gainful employment (or) support to start up a social enterprise or business in a supportive infrastructure that pays enough to afford a lifestyle without alcohol and (or) drugs misuse. Effective and constant guidance or consistent counselling for abuse and support to reintegrate her into an educational environment. Social support and community development within her local environment. Support to regain access to her children through legal means where possible; a home to raise her children in and support to get her feet off the ground with regards to the rigours of the academic lifestyle.

Part 3 : Representation for the People

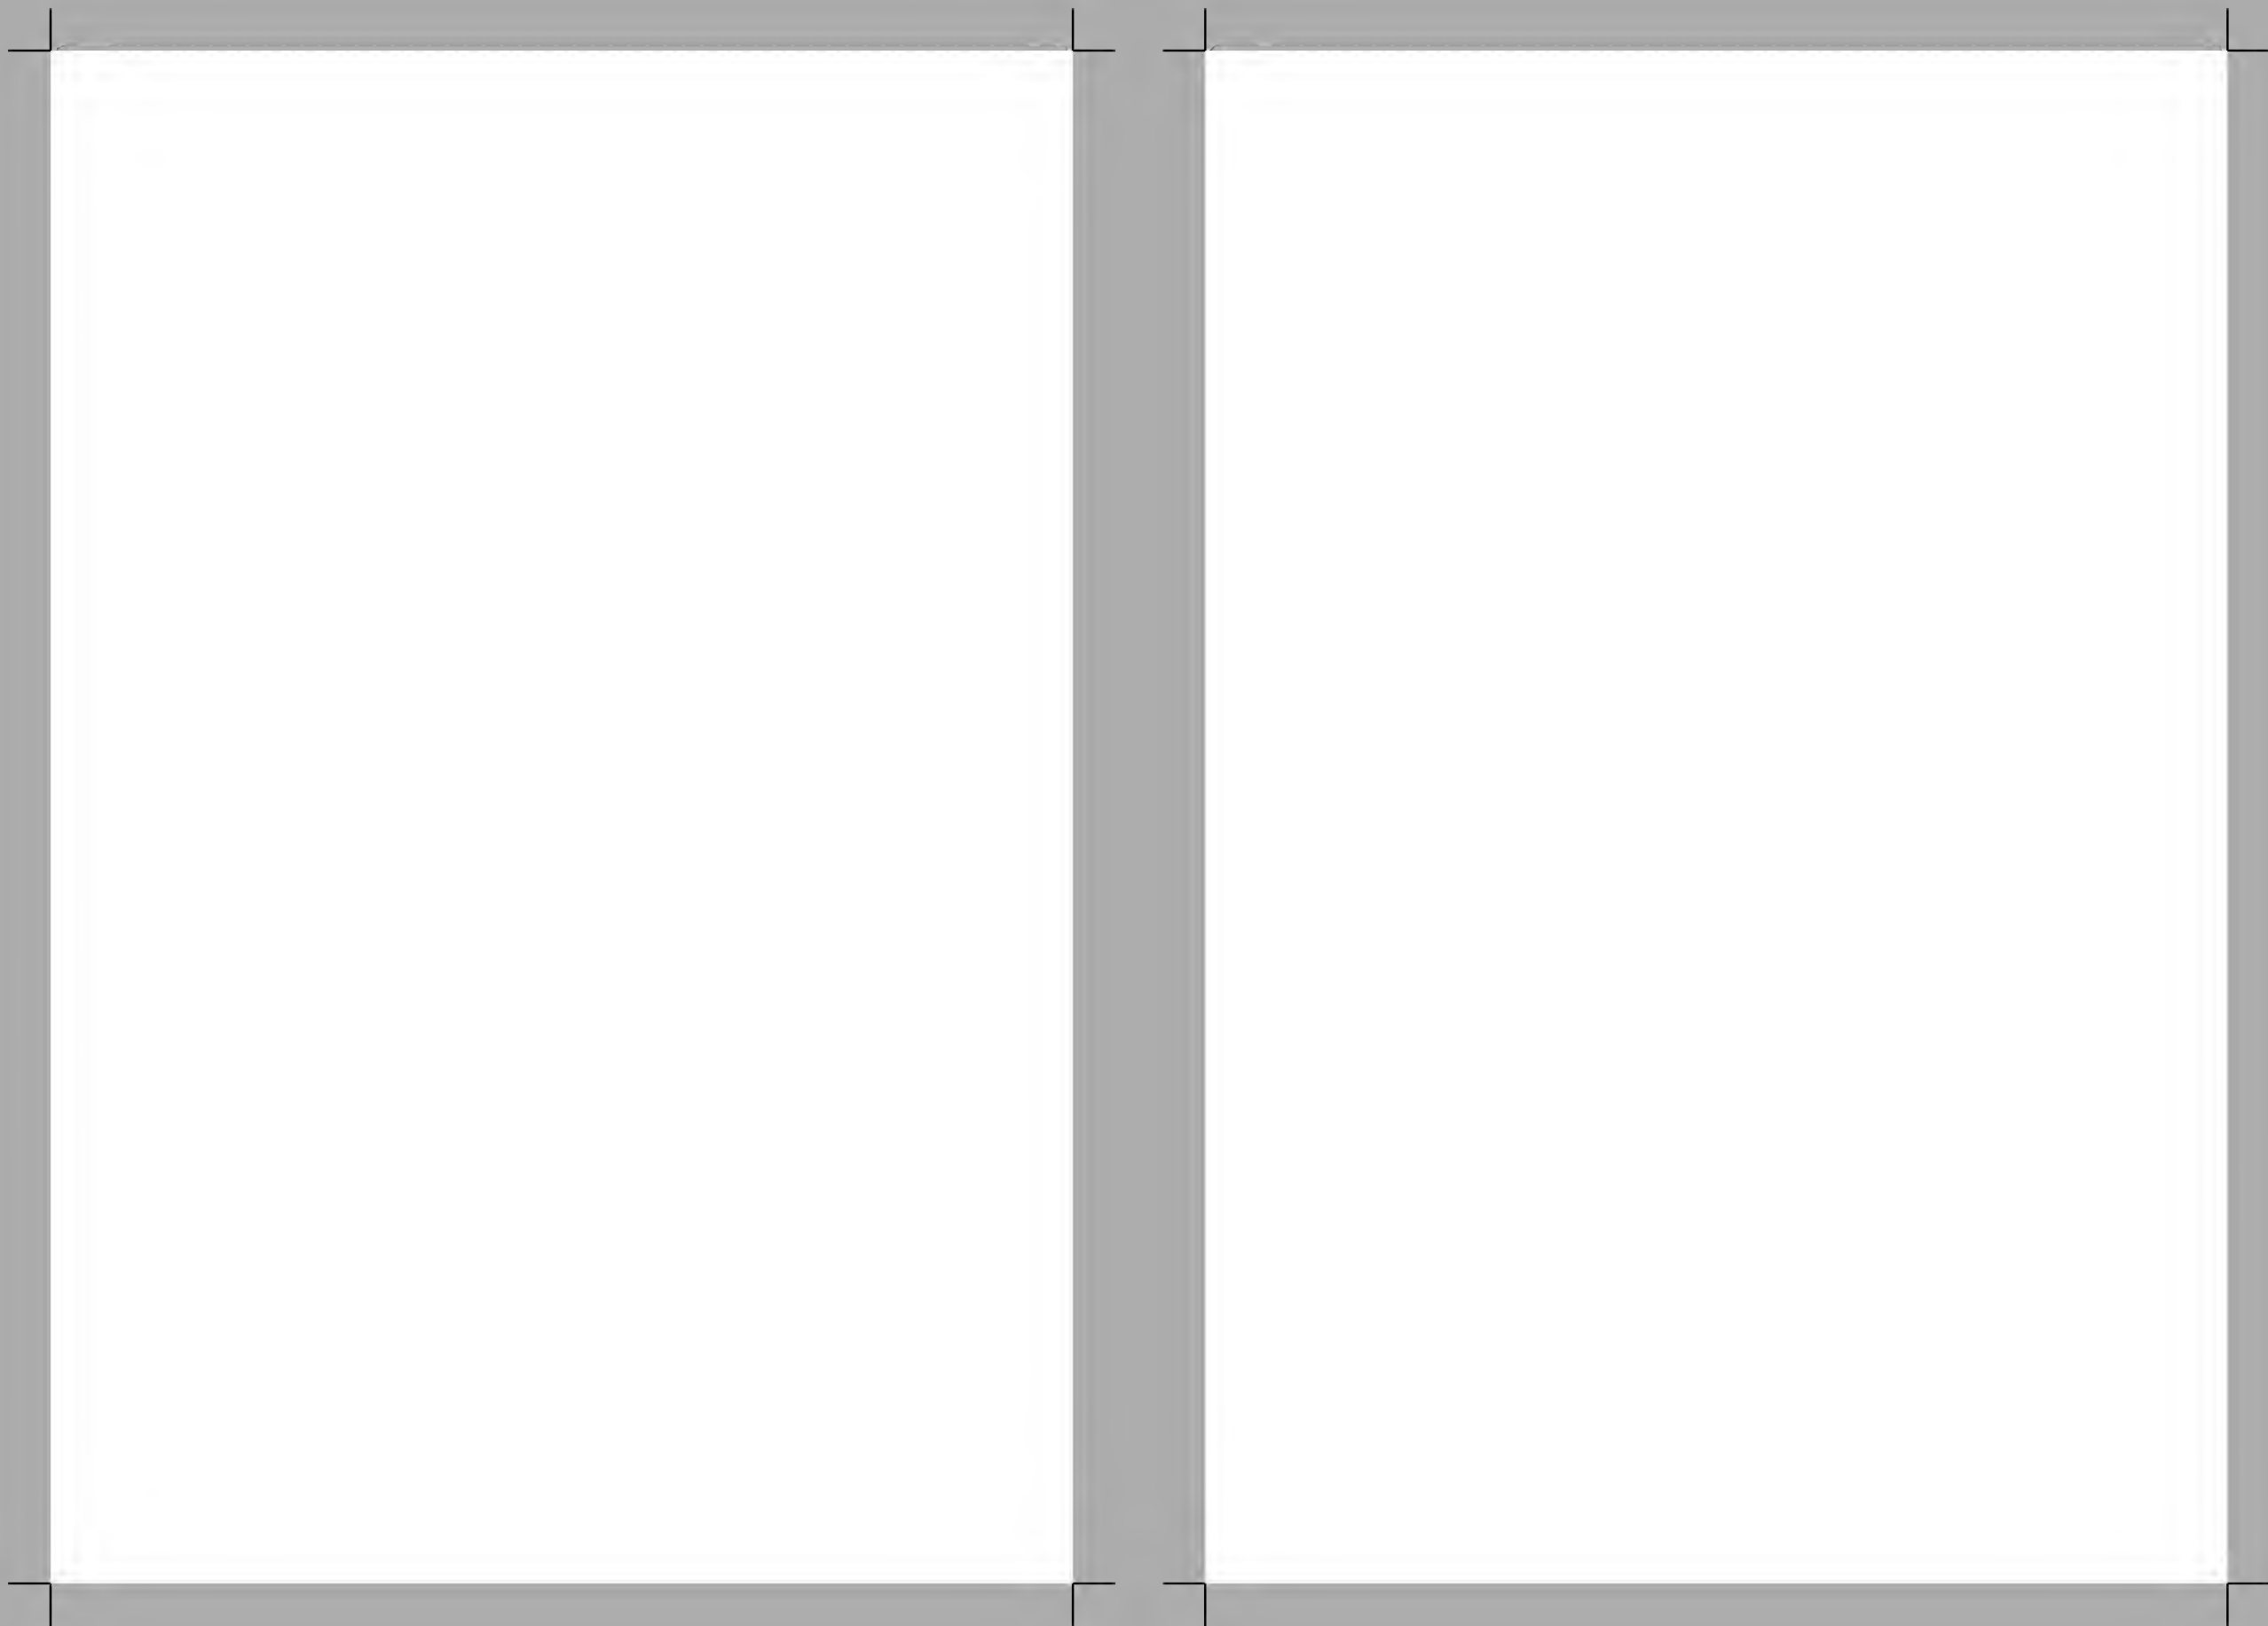

Concluding notes

Putting aside personal and social choices and requirements from government infrastructure in the country that you live in, a simple question is being put forward with regards to the above cases; each of which are justifiably repeated time and again as a result of the fact that Scotland is being torn apart and killed day after day by gateway drugs and alcohol. Substance misuse and poor infrastructure or limited infrastructure is not the cause of educational facilities being shut down. Substance misuse and poor infrastructure is not the reason for essential maintenance and local council services being withheld from the public. Substance misuse and poor quality support is not the reason that people are literally on the streets, facing eviction or losing access to their children, though you might assume it is.

Professional support with regards to achieving parenting excellence is one route to changing the face of the nation, but simply assuming that an education will fix all of a persons problems, or even money is completely incorrect. It won't bring back the children who passed away due to miscarriage or abortion. It won't bring back the children who died of suicide and neither will it bring back the parents who lost children. An empathetic soul or empathetic words can only do so much, but the reality is, we as a nation need to look at each other instead of at the floor or our leaders for the answers. The law is supposed to cover all aspects of a persons life, and yet, nobody cares whether a teenager runs away from home. Nobody cares about mental ill health in ethnic minorities or the foreign passport holder who's only recourse to an educational discourse is a coffee cup held out with arm outstretched on a street with a castle just behind him / her. Unfortunately nobody has time for the homeless who have very little due to stereotypes as to the nature of the lifestyle(s) they live or the substance(s) they consume.

Once I called an ambulance for a woman who had passed out after taking what is known as liquid ecstasy. Her partner, a homeless man was shaken and didn't have a phone, only spare change, but no knowledge of where the nearest phone was. It was on a busy street at night and nobody had the time to spare for her. The ambulance, which took an extra-specially long time to arrive after being informed that the two might have been homeless and on drugs travelled in the wrong direction, thus arriving at the wrong location. She was pregnant.

Proof